Dr. Tyler Raup, Au.D., received his Doctorate in Audiology from Towson University after completing his clinical fellowship here at Chesapeake Hearing Centers. He attended Penn State University as an undergraduate and received a Bachelor of Science in communication sciences and disorders.

Dr. Raup received his clinical training and experience in a variety of settings including the Towson University Speech and Hearing Clinic, Baltimore City School District, ENTAA Care, and the Walter Reed National Military Medical Center in Bethesda. He worked as a clinical audiologist in a private practice in Philadelphia before returning to Chesapeake Hearing Centers. His clinical interests include amplification and hearing aids, tinnitus management, and vestibular (balance) assessment.

Dr. Raup is a native of Central Pennsylvania, a proud Penn State alum, and a Philly sports fan. He is active in his church community and enjoys volunteering his time for several causes, including raising money for cancer research. Dr. Raup can be seen in our Annapolis and Columbia offices.

Chesapeake Hearing Centers is the oldest private practice of audiology in the state of Maryland. As a preeminent regional center for the evaluation of hearing and balance disorders, we were one of the first practices in this state to offer computer-programmable hearing aids in 1991, and we remain a leader in dispensing a variety of programmable and wireless instruments. Educated, credentialed, experienced, and with professional competence, we evaluate, treat, and serve exactly the way we would want to be treated... with courtesy and respect. We provide services in several offices located in Anne Arundel County, Howard County, and on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. We accept self-referred patients as well as referrals from physicians, educators, rehabilitation professionals, psychologists, insurance, and other organizations.
